Video calls can also transmit live images of the speakers with a webcam or camera on smart devices.

A video call is a phone call that uses an Internet connection and allows people to see and hear each other in real time.

For example, they require a smart device with a stable and high-speed Internet connection.

However, video calls also have some drawbacks.

One of its benefits is that it is cheap or even free and saves time because people don't need to travel to talk to people from distant places.

In other words, without Internet access, video calls cannot be made.

In short, despite these downsides, video calls are still a common tool of communication.
