Mount Everest is Earth's highest mountain. The China-Nepal border goes across its summit. It's 8,849 meters high and is one of the world's greatest natural wonders.

Mount Everest is very popular to climb and attracts many climbers each year. There are two main climbing routes: one from the south in Nepal and the other from the north in China. The southern route is easier to climb than the northern route.

Although climbing the routes is attractive to professional climbers and serious hikers, they are also extremely dangerous. Terrible weather, strong winds, and falling snow and ice are just some of the dangers. Hundreds of people have died while trying to climb Mount Everest.

Between 1921 and 1952, there were many unsuccessful attempts to climb the mountain. Tenzing Norgay and Edmund Hillary were the first climbers to get to the peak in 1953, using the southern route. In 1960, people reached the summit for the first time using the northern route.

The best time to climb Mount Everest is April or May each year, when the weather is the calmest. The other months are too dangerous for climbing to the summit because of really strong winds, heavy snow, and rain.

23. There are many routes to take, but the northern route is the safest to get to the summit. _____

24. Climbing Mount Everest is extremely dangerous, with many risks such as terrible weather, strong winds, and falling snow and ice. _____
