Staying in Different Places

When people go on holiday, they can stay in many different types of accommodation. Some people stay in hotels. Hotels can be big or small. Most hotels have a reception, rooms with bathrooms, and sometimes a restaurant.

Other people like to stay in hostels. Hostels are cheaper than hotels. In a hostel, you often share a room with other people. There is usually a kitchen where guests can cook their own food.

Some people choose to rent an apartment. An apartment is like a small home. It has a kitchen, a bathroom, a bedroom, and a living room. People like apartments because they can feel like home.

Camping is another popular choice. People sleep in tents or caravans. They stay in campsites, usually in the countryside or near the beach. Many campsites have toilets, showers, and small shops.
