The Importance of Science Education in Schools

Why should we teach science to children in schools? Why do many schools focus on STEM subjects like science, technology, engineering, and mathematics? One clear reason is that children interact with science and technology every day. Teaching science helps them understand the role these fields play in their daily lives.

When children learn science, they also develop the ability to think critically and search for evidence-based answers. They learn to give reasons for what they observe and build logical explanations.

In addition, science education helps students improve their problem-solving skills and analytical thinking. These are useful in both academic settings and real-life situations.

These skills will play a big part in shaping their future, whether in education or the workplace. Moreover, if students start learning science early, they are more likely to develop curiosity and interest in science-related fields. They may also be more prepared to get involved in future careers related to science, research, or innovation.

Sir Tim Berners-Lee, an English computer scientist, invented the World Wide Web in 1989.

At first, he wanted to develop a web for scientists around the world to share information and the results of their experiments. At that time the Internet already existed. But he created a way to use the Internet to link documents to each other. Soon, he turned it into a free space for people to share knowledge, communicate, and cooperate.

The World Wide Web allows people to get all kinds of information online. The information can be images, videos, or files. It has become a significant tool for everyone, from scientists, researchers to young students as well. Scientists and researchers can share their study results, students can use it for learning or doing research online. Businesses even use it to advertise their products and to do business. Everybody can use the World Wide Web to watch videos, communicate, and attend meetings.

(VD) PART 2 .Writing a paragraph of 80 to 100 words to express your opinion about the idea below: "Robots will soon replace teachers at school.". You might use the following suggestions. (1.0 point)

USEFUL LANGUAGE:

- store much information
- follow programmed instructions
- do simple actions
- cannot help students behave
- cannot feel or understand emotions
- cannot replace human connection
- robots will never replace teachers

OUTLINE

Introduction:

State your opinion clearly (agree/disagree)

Body:

Reason 1: Robots cannot teach students behavior/morality

Reason 2: Robots lack emotions and understanding

Reason 3: Robots only follow what is programmed

Conclusion:

Restate your opinion or give a final thought

Writing sample

I disagree that robots will soon replace teachers at school. First, even though robots can store a lot of information, they cannot teach students how to behave correctly in different situations. Second, robots don't have emotions, so they cannot help students with problems or give personal support. Finally, robots only follow programmed instructions and cannot adjust their lessons to fit different learning styles. That's why I believe that robots can support teaching, but they will never fully replace human teachers.
