THE ORIGINS OF FRUIT NAMES

You know how most fruits taste, smell, and look. You can also easily name each one. But did you know that some fruits have interesting stories about their names?

“Banana” comes from the Arabic word banan. Banan means “finger.” When Arabians discovered this fruit, they thought it looked like a yellow finger.

Many people think kiwifruits are from New Zealand. But this is not true. Kiwifruits really come from China. They were called Chinese gooseberries. New Zealanders changed the name to kiwifruit because their brown, fuzzy skin looks like a kiwi bird.

The coconut’s name is also related to an animal. In the 16th century, a Portuguese explorer discovered the coconut. In Portuguese, coco means “monkey’s face.” The explorer thought the three dark circles on the shell looked like a monkey!

Next time you’re at the grocery store, take a closer look at the fruits. Then try to guess how they got their names!

There was once a man and his wife who loved each other very much. They were very poor. While her husband went out to find work as a farmland, she would go from house to house to wash clothes. Their earnings were not much. The wife had lovely long hair which she was proud of. He had a watch which was very precious to him. It

Once, the rain fell so hard for a few days that they had no work. Their money was running out. Both of them were worried that the other would go hungry. So, when the sun came out, they immediately left without saying a word to each other. When they came back a few hours later, they were each carrying bags full of food. The wife asked her husband where he got the money from. He had sold his precious watch to buy food for his wife. When her husband asked her the same question, she took off the shawl covering her head. The man gasped! Her hair was very short. She did it to get money for her husband's food. They hugged each other and laughed. They had both sacrificed something they loved for their beloved.
