

Who

Subject - Object

Subject

Who is going to chair the meeting?

Anna is the one who is in charge with the project.

Who is the new CEO of the company?

Object

Who did you interview yesterday?

Who have you invited for the meeting?

I don't know who they chose for the new position.

"He who knows all the answers, has not been asked all the questions."

Confucious

We cannot love someone who we never laugh with.

Agnes Repplier

Whom

Object + preposition

Have to

That's the man with whom I work.

To whom it may concern.

Is she the manager to whom George responds?

Of whom is she proud?

Can

That's the man who/whom I work with.

Who/whom should we count on?

He is the client who/whom Laura invited to the party.

Exception

Not the object

There're 20 employees, 18 of whom live nearby.

There are a lot of visitors at the trade fair.

Many of whom are from abroad.

For Whom

novel by Ernest Hemingway

In each of us there's another whom we don't know.

Carl Jung

Exercise

1. did you ask for help?
2. On can we count for this project?
3. has the priority in this matter?
4. For does Sarah work?
5. Shawn is the supplier has sent the samples and the estimate.
6. To does Jack respond when your boss is away.
7. Sam is the director has been appointed for the new CMO position.
8. Chris is the coordinator to we must respond now.
9. To it may concern.
10. at work do you get along with?
11. do you work for?
12. Sue's contacted the client I met at the world summit last month.
13. By any chance, do you know is in charge with the R&D area?
14. We are 15 in the team. 3 of can speak both, English and Spanish.
15. For do you work?