Jorge

People talk about technology like it's something separate from our normal daily life. ¹ C I think it's because many of the people who write or talk about technology remember what it was like before. So, for them, there has been a big change in their life. I grew up with mobile phones, wireless internet and tablet computers so I can't imagine life without these things.

Beth

Technology is something I've always found challenging. When I was a child, we didn't even have a phone in the house. We used to use the public phone box down the road. When the first computer was installed at our school, it was a big deal to the students and the teachers. It had a tiny green screen and we didn't really know what to do with it. By the time I left school, I still had no idea what it should be used for. Since then, I've had problems keeping up with all the new developments in technology. If my daughter hadn't helped me, I would never have understood how to use the internet and social networks. ² _____

Mark

³ ____ I think technology has taken over, and it's almost impossible to have a private life now. That's why I threw my mobile phone and other electronic devices away three years ago. I don't have a computer at home and I never go on the internet unless I have to, but it's becoming more necessary all the time. These days, the government, big companies and all your friends always know where you are and what you're doing. ⁴ ____ One day we will regret them knowing everything about our private lives but it will be too late.

Cheikou

⁵ ____ In a very short time we've gone from having phones and computers in our homes to having them in our pockets and on our wrists. We're able to find out any information we want at any time of the day or night. Yesterday, a friend of mine asked me if I had ever been to Montenegro, in South Western Europe. I hadn't. But within a few seconds I was flying over it using an app on my phone. I could walk down the main street of the capital city and look at all the buildings and parks. If I had wanted to, I could have booked a holiday there within just a couple of minutes.
