Multicultural Britain

Britain has always been a mixed society. In the past, Celts, Romans, Saxons, Vikings, and Normans all settled there. Over the last 150 years, people from Ireland, former British colonies, and the European Union have also come to live in Britain.

In the 1840s, a famine in Ireland caused many to leave. While most went to the USA, many also moved to Britain.

In the 1950s and 1960s, the British government invited people from its former colonies, especially the West Indies, Pakistan, India, and Hong Kong, to live and work in the UK.

People from the EU are free to live and work in any EU country, so many from Central and Eastern Europe have recently arrived.

Britain today is multicultural. There are many Indian and Chinese restaurants. The Notting Hill Carnival, started by West Indian immigrants, is Europe's biggest street festival. Irish pubs and music are also popular.

London's Tower Bridge

Tower Bridge is one of the most famous bridges in the world. It was designed by architect Horace Jones and completed in 1894. About 11,000 tons of steel were used to build its 265-meter-long frame. Today, Tower Bridge is one of London's top tourist attractions.

Taking photographs of the bridge is a popular activity. Visitors can also go inside and enjoy stunning views of London from the walkways between the towers.

In 2014, glass floors were added to the walkways, giving people a new way to experience the bridge. The floors, over 40 meters above the River Thames, let visitors look down at the traffic and boats passing below. It's especially exciting to see the bridge open and close beneath your feet.
