Spelling and Codes in the past

Most people have trouble spelling. In fact, about 100 years ago, Andrew Carnegie tried to make changes in the English language. He correctly predicted that English would become the most important language in the world. So, his group wanted to make English easier to read and write, and created new spellings for 300 common words. The men believed that words should be spelled the way they sound. For example, surprise was spelled surprize, ghost became gost, and through became thru.

King Solo and the True Owner

Once upon a time, in a peaceful kingdom, there was a wise and fair king named Solo. One day, two men came to him with a problem about a cow. The cow belonged to one man, but it sadly got lost on its way home and was caught by the other man. However, both of them argued and claimed that they were the real owners of the cow and had taken care of it from the start. They asked the King to be the judge and decide who was right and wrong.

0. Who is Solo?

- ☒ A. A wise and fair king B. A helpful neighbor C. A funny storyteller

1. What did the two men argue about?

- A. A piece of jewelry B. The owner of a cow C. Their favorite food

King Solo listened carefully to both men's arguments. He knew that one of them was lying. To find the truth, he came up with a plan. "Bring me a knife," King Solo said. "We shall divide the cow in two, and each of you shall receive half." One man agreed to this idea and wanted half of the cow. But the other man cried out in sadness and begged the king not to harm the cow.

2. How did King Solo solve the problem?

- A. He asked the villagers for help. B. He divided the cow in two. C. He chose one man randomly.

3. How did the two men feel when the King suggested dividing the cow?

- A. They both laughed and agreed. B. They both cried and disagreed. C. One man agreed, but the other disagreed.
