The Future of Smartphones

The latest smartphones are sleek, slim, and packed with advanced features such as high-resolution cameras, fast processors, and artificial intelligence (AI) capabilities. They allow users to perform a wide range of tasks, including browsing the Internet, sending emails, making video calls, playing games, and streaming videos.

Looking ahead, smartphones are likely to become even more advanced, featuring innovations like foldable screens, holographic displays, and extended battery life. Artificial intelligence will play a significant role in improving these devices, with technologies like voice recognition, facial recognition, and natural language processing becoming more accurate and useful.

Smartphones will likely become even more integrated into our lives, helping us manage various daily activities such as health tracking, smart home control, and navigation. The possibilities are endless, and the future of smartphones promises to bring even greater convenience and efficiency to users everywhere.

With ongoing research and development, smartphones will not only be tools for communication but also essential companions in both personal and professional life. It's exciting to imagine what the next generation of smart devices will look like.

The Evolution and Future of Computers

Today, computers are widely used and found in many settings, such as homes, offices, hospitals, and schools. People depend on them so much that when computers are “down,” they often feel frustrated and unable to work. Computers are now essential for everything from communication and entertainment to navigation.

Modern computers are much faster, smaller, and cheaper than those in the past. Some are as small as a deck of cards. Users can work from different places thanks to notebook computers, often called “ultra-lights,” and hand-held Personal Data Assistants (PDAs). These portable devices can connect to networks, making it easier to access information from anywhere and manage time better.

In the future, computers will be even smaller and faster. They may include “smart” technologies, such as artificial intelligence, expert systems, or natural language recognition. Some might be as tiny as coins. These advanced features will help users handle large amounts of data more efficiently.

Examples of future technologies include wearable computers, virtual reality gadgets, DNA computers, and quantum or optical computers. These innovations represent the next generation of computing that is already starting to appear.

(Adapted from workbook Global)

(TH) Question 25. What is the main idea of the passage?

- A. Computers are too complicated to use in the future.
- B. Computers are only used in entertainment.
- C. Computers have become essential and will continue to improve.
- D. Computers are no longer useful in daily life.

(NB) Question 26. What is another name for notebook computers mentioned in the passage?

- A. Hand-helds
- B. Ultra-lights
- C. Smart cards
- D. Mini desktops

(NB) Question 27. What can Personal Data Assistants (PDAs) do?

- A. Print documents anywhere
- B. Make phone calls without the Internet
- C. Connect to networks and access information
- D. Store photos and videos

(NB) Question 28. What size might future computers be?

- A. As large as books
- B. As heavy as old TVs
- C. As small as coins
- D. As big as smartphones

(TH) Question 29. The word “features” in paragraph 3 is closest in meaning to:

- A. faults
- B. functions
- C. appearances
- D. forms

My Robot Vacuum Cleaner

I recently purchased a robot vacuum cleaner, and it has changed the way I clean my home. (30) _____, I no longer have to spend hours sweeping or vacuuming the floors. The device can move around rooms, avoiding obstacles like furniture and stairs, and it saves me a lot of time and effort during the week.

(31) _____, it continues cleaning even when I’m not at home. This is because it’s programmed to follow a daily schedule and automatically returns to its charging dock when the battery is low. I find it very convenient, especially on busy weekdays when I don’t have time to clean myself.

My vacuum robot connects to a smartphone app, where I can receive cleaning updates and control it from anywhere. I especially enjoy relaxing while it moves quietly around the house, picking up dust and pet hair from hard floors and carpets.

It even cleans under beds and tables (32) _____, making it easy to maintain a tidy living space. (33) _____, this small device has become an essential part of my daily routine. I now have more time for myself and less stress about housework.

(VD) PART 2 .Writing a paragraph of 100 to 120 words about what your favourite electronic device can do now and what it will be able to do in the future.. You might use the following suggestions. (1.0 point)

USEFUL LANGUAGE:

- stay connected with friends / family
- take photos / play music / watch videos
- check the weather / surf the Internet
- make video calls / join online meetings
- track fitness / sleep / heart rate
- translate languages
- control smart home devices
- will be able to recognize voice commands
- will help people study or work more efficiently
- will become smaller / faster / more intelligent

OUTLINE

Introduction:

What your favourite electronic device is.

Body:

- What it can do now (list 2–3 current functions).

- What it will be able to do in the future (predict 2–3 future features).

Conclusion:

Why you love it / Why it's important to you.

Writing sample (Suggested Answer):

My favourite electronic device is my tablet. Right now, it helps me do many things like reading e-books, taking online classes, and watching English videos. It's light, easy to carry, and has a long battery life. I also use it to chat with friends, play games, and search for information. In the future, I think my tablet will be even more advanced. It will use artificial intelligence to give me learning advice and help me study faster. I believe it will have a better camera and stronger battery. It may even translate English books into Vietnamese instantly or turn handwriting into typed text. For these reasons, I love my tablet and believe it will become even more useful in the future.
