DESCARTES AND THE FLY

Long ago in France, there was a boy named Rene Descartes. He was very sick, so he often stayed in bed.

One day, Descartes saw a fly on his ceiling. After a few minutes, the fly flew to a different place on the ceiling. Descartes wanted to tell his parents where he saw the fly.

Suddenly, he had an idea. He drew blue lines from left to right on the ceiling. He called them Line 1, Line 2, and Line 3. He drew red lines from top to bottom. They became Line A, Line B, and Line C. When the fly moved, he drew a star in its place. Then he told his parents how the fly had moved. "Mom, it flew from B3 to C1!"

With his smart thinking, Descartes came up with a new way to describe a location on a map. We call it the coordinate plane. We use it to read maps and graphs. Without Descartes, reading maps would not be the same!

A Midsummer Night's Dream

Felix Mendelssohn was a famous German composer. He was very talented. When he was only 10 years old, he could play and write music.

Mendelssohn liked the play A Midsummer Night's Dream by William Shakespeare. The story is a comedy about love on a warm summer night. Many people think that magical things happen on summer nights. This play is full of magic. There are funny fairies and a talking donkey. Mendelssohn wanted to write music for the play.

When you listen to Mendelssohn's music, you can imagine a magical forest on a midsummer night. The music begins with a light, quick violin. When you hear it, you can imagine fairies flying in the sky. Mendelssohn also used the violin to make the donkey's sound: "Hee-haw! Hee-haw!" Mendelssohn also wrote special music for each part of the story. For example, the two young couples in the play get married, and Mendelssohn composed the "Wedding March" for that scene. Today, it is still a famous wedding song.
