Today I'm <sup>0</sup> to tell you all about my friend, Alastair. He's <sup>1</sup> person I know. He loves talking <sup>2</sup> the games he plays on his laptop. He's absolutely <sup>3</sup> about playing games, especially online.

I <sup>4</sup> him since we were both six years old. He's my friend because he's cheerful and <sup>5</sup> – he always wants to do things for other people.

Alastair also does a lot of sport, but he doesn't eat much healthy food. He eats <sup>6</sup> crisps and burgers! He's much <sup>7</sup> me at most sports, except swimming.

I always <sup>8</sup> him on Twitter – he posts some really funny tweets! Sometimes, he's a bit <sup>9</sup> and makes big decisions without really thinking about them carefully. He always works <sup>10</sup> at school, so the teachers like him too. I'm lucky to have a friend like Alastair.
