

You do this when something irritates your throat. → _____

Red, itchy spots on your skin caused by an allergy or illness. → _____

Air suddenly comes out of your nose and mouth, often due to a cold. → _____

When a part of your body gets bigger and rounder, usually due to injury. → _____

To lose consciousness for a short time. → _____

A small bubble of fluid on the skin caused by friction or burns. → _____

When you feel like you might vomit. → _____

When you feel like everything is spinning or unsteady. → _____

To injure your ankle by turning it awkwardly. → _____

Similar to twisting but usually more serious, involving ligaments. → _____

When something blocks your throat and you can't breathe. → _____

Illness caused by eating bad or contaminated food. → _____

To lose consciousness (similar to #5). → _____

To put your body in a horizontal position to rest. → _____

To recover from being sick. → _____

Skin damage caused by too much sun exposure. → _____

When your body reacts badly to something (e.g. food, pollen). → _____

A high body temperature, often a sign of infection. → _____

A small piece of material to cover a cut. → _____

A strip of fabric used to wrap and support an injury. → _____

To vomit. → _____

To become conscious again after fainting. → _____

Medicine you take to relieve pain. → _____