Last month, I visited my cousin Sofia in Quito for the first time. She lives in a busy neighborhood near the center of the city. The weather was cool and cloudy, but it didn't rain during my trip. I packed jeans, sneakers, and a hoodie, and that was perfect for the week.

On the first day, Sofia took me to the park near her school. There were a lot of people walking their dogs and children playing. We sat on a bench next to the fountain and ate some snacks. After that, we went to a small café behind the supermarket and had hot chocolate.

On the second day, we visited a museum. It was full of old clothes, tools, and photographs from Ecuador's history. I took many pictures because I love learning about the past. In the evening, we stayed at home and watched a movie. Sofia made popcorn and we sat on the floor with blankets.

My last day in Quito was Sunday. We woke up early and walked to the local market. I bought a scarf and some postcards for my family. Then we had lunch in a restaurant next to the market. I had chicken with rice and a juice made from passion fruit—it was delicious!

I was a little sad to leave, but it was a great trip. I want to visit Sofia again next year—maybe in the summer when the weather is warmer.
