The family in the tree

William loves going to stay with Grandma and Grandpa. They live on a farm in the countryside. Last summer when he was there, his grandpa helped him to make a house in one of the trees. They put a little chair into it and William played in his tree house every day.

William and his parents went to the farm again last weekend. William ran to the tree to see his house. It was full of leaves so he had to get a brush and clean the floor. When William looked in the corner of the house he saw five small eggs, which were on some dry grass on a little chair.

He climbed down the tree and ran to get his grandpa. 'Come and see,' he shouted.

Grandpa came to see the eggs. 'Can I take them back to your house?' asked William. 'No,' Grandpa said. 'Let's wait for the mother bird.'

William and his grandpa sat quietly in the tree house and waited. Then a grey and white bird came back to the eggs.

William had to go home the next day, but three days later his grandma phoned him, 'Come back to the farm quickly!' she said.

William's mum took him to the farm in the car after school. They climbed the tree very quietly and they looked into the tree house very carefully. There were five little baby birds on the chair.
