I met my friend Kazue yesterday for the first time! Actually, I first met her online about six months ago. She's from Japan and now she's visiting my country with her family. I¹ greeted her at the airport when she arrived. In her emails, she² described herself as quite small, but in fact she's as tall as me. I also met her brother and her parents. I wanted to³ shake hands with them, but Kazue quietly⁴ whispered in my ear that Japanese people don't usually do that when they meet. I already knew what her brother looked like, because Kazue sometimes⁵ posts photos of him online. He was very friendly and he⁶ listened a lot. Kazue's parents don't speak English, but Kazue⁷ told everything I said into Japanese. Kazue and her family were tired and wanted to go to their hotel. I arranged to meet Kazue the next day and we⁸ said goodbye as they drove away in a taxi.

KIM ¹ Can you tell (you / tell) me why you didn't reply to my email?
 DAN Sorry! I was at my grandparents' house in the middle of the countryside. I² didn't use my phone.
 KIM Really? But you³ post messages online. I saw them.
 DAN Err, yes, but I⁴ didn't check my emails.
 KIM Right, anyway, ⁵ you help me practise my presentation tomorrow for next week's test?
 DAN Sorry, I⁶ didn't do it then. I'm really busy. I⁷ help you now, though.
 KIM Oh, I⁸ haven't practise now. I haven't written anything yet.
 DAN Well, we⁹ write it together now, if you want. What's the topic of the presentation?
 KIM How to communicate successfully!

I¹ couldn't play the piano very well when I was younger. I didn't like practising because the piano was in our living room downstairs. That meant everyone had to listen to me when I played and no one² watch TV or read. Now I've got an electric piano and I³ use headphones. It's great because my family⁴ hear anything I'm playing! So now I'm practising a lot and I⁵ play quite well.

I⁶ can't swim at all, but I'd like to. Last summer, I went with my friends to the beach and I⁷ join in the fun in the water. That made me feel sad, so I hope I⁸ be able to start taking lessons in the next few months. I know that I⁹ be able to swim like a fish after just a few lessons, but I just want to be confident in the water so that I¹⁰ be able to swim with my friends next summer!
