Layla jumped out of bed. Her alarm hadn't gone off! Today was the day of their big trip to Istanbul. They had booked the flight months ago and had planned every detail — hotel, activities, even a Turkish cooking class.

Layla threw on some clothes, grabbed her suitcase, and ran outside. The taxi had just arrived. Amira looked worried.

"We're cutting it close," she said.

On the way to the airport, the girls realized they forgot to check in online. At the airport, they ran to the counter. The staff told them they were five minutes late — their seats had been given away.

Layla felt terrible, but Amira stayed calm. She asked if there was another flight. The agent found one, leaving in two hours. It cost a bit more, but they agreed it was better than losing the whole trip.
