Food in Texas

How often do you eat in restaurants? What dishes do you love? Do you know how to cook them? This week's food blog is by Clara West from Corpus Christi, Texas.

Corpus Christi is a great place to try Texan food—especially fish dishes—because it's next to the ocean. There are some great restaurants, but my favorite restaurant is my grandparents' restaurant, The Catch. I often go there after school, and my grandpa teaches me how to cook regional dishes.

Tacos with meat are popular in Texas, but here in Corpus Christi we love fish tacos. Tourists love them, too. They're white fish in corn tortillas with yogurt, vegetables, Mexican cheese, and special flavorings. Perfect! My favorite dish is Shrimp Picayune. It's shrimp with lemon juice and brown sugar. It's fantastic with rice and salad. I have it once a week.

Of course, Texans love meat. Chicken Fried Steak is a famous Texan dish. But it doesn't have any chicken in it! It's beef (red meat) fried in egg and flour. People usually eat it with potatoes and vegetables.

On the weekend, my friends and I often have lunch in town. We don't usually sit in restaurants. We buy sandwiches, pizzas, or tacos. My favorite lunch is a hamburger and fries from a great restaurant called Lulu's. We sometimes have a float. It's soda with ice cream in it.

Sundays are great. My parents and I never get up early on Sundays. We sometimes walk to the Yellow Bird Restaurant for a late breakfast. They make a big English breakfast, and we love it! In summer, we have a barbecue by the ocean about once a month. Dad cooks and we sit by the ocean, eat awesome food, and chill out!
