

Instructions: Drag and drop the correct description on each space

The use of if + will + base form of the verb suggests that the acceptance of the condition is the basis for a deal.

As long as and provided that are also used to state conditions.

We use it when we think the expected outcome of a situation is very likely

We use conditional sentences when discussing the terms of an agreement, making hypothetical proposals, bargaining and making concessions.

If the proposal is more tentative and possibly less certain, we use past verb forms.

We use unless in conditional sentences to mean if not

CONDITIONALS

First conditional

1.

- If you order now, we will give you a discount.
- We will reduce the price by 10% if you give us a firm order in advance.
- If we give you 90 days ' credit instead of 60, will you give us the interest you would have paid?

- If you will help me with this project, I'll let you take the lead on the next one.

2.

- We won't be able to start construction unless you train our personnel.

3.

- We will sign the contract as long as you guarantee prices for the next 18 months.
- We can reach agreement on a joint venture provided that our firm has a representative on your board.

Second conditional

- If we said we were prepared to deliver in March, would you make a firm order?
- If you agreed to create more jobs, we might think about a productivity deal.
- If the government found some extra money, would you be prepared to create a subsidiary in our country?