- 2 What are some good things about where you live?
- 3 What are some bad things about where you live?

Introducing the Topic

In old times, most people lived in the countryside. They lived on farms and grew their own food. By the 1800s, people moved to the city to find jobs. Today, over half the people in the world live in cities. Cities have many benefits for children, but there are also problems. This is why some parents want to raise their kids in the countryside.

Learning about the Topic

Should children grow up in cities or in rural areas?

Đọc và gạch chân các lập luận hỗ trợ trong đoạn 2 và đoạn 3.

Many parents want to provide the best environment for their children. For many parents, this means raising children in rural areas. Yet millions of parents think cities are better for their children.

Cities Are Better for Children

To start, children have better chances to have good educations. Many of the best schools, such as Columbia University in New York and Harvard University in Boston, are in cities. Cities also have more museums and art galleries. This means that city kids have more chances to learn. Second, children in cities meet many people with different backgrounds.

For example, more than 36 percent of the people in New York are immigrants. They bring their customs and food with them to cities. Kids there are exposed to many cultures. It is easy to learn and understand different cultures in cities.

Rural Areas Are Better for Children

First, children can experience the outdoors easily. In rural areas, houses are much cheaper. Parents can buy bigger houses with large yards. So children can play outside more often. Children can also walk through the woods and see animals. This lets kids learn more about nature. Second, kids in rural areas can be healthier. The air is cleaner in rural areas. So kids will have fewer problems with their lungs. These children also eat fresh food more. This helps them grow up stronger and healthier.
