Arkangel

When Protection Becomes Control

Marie is a single mother who wants to protect her daughter, Sara. After a scary moment at the park, Marie decides to try a new technology: Arkangel. It is a chip that goes inside the child's head. With a tablet, the mother can see everything Sara sees, know her location, and block anything stressful or dangerous.

At first, Marie feels safe. She watches Sara at school and blocks violent images. But problems begin when Sara cannot understand real emotions. She cannot see blood, angry faces, or pain. She becomes confused and disconnected from reality.

As Sara grows up, she starts to feel frustrated. Her mother spies on her and reads her messages. Sara wants freedom and privacy. One day, she finds out about the Arkangel chip and decides to rebel. The relationship between mother and daughter becomes tense and broken.
