Being a real role model

Many teenagers admire celebrities because of their fame, talent, or lifestyle. However, being a celebrity also means having great influence on others, especially young fans. A true role model is not just someone who sings or acts well, but someone who uses their recognition to make a difference.

Some famous people support charity or speak about social issues in public. These actions can bring them positive publicity, but not all publicity is good. Some celebrities are in the news for negative reasons, like bad behavior or fake endorsements. That's why fans need to choose carefully who they aspire to become.

Still, many celebrities today are working hard to show good values. For example, they may focus on their performance, work with talent, and celebrate real achievements. These are the idols who deserve our support.
