Đoạn văn:

The science has always fascinated me, especially the biology and the chemistry. In school, I used to enjoy the studying about how the human body works and how the nature interacts with the people. The people often ignore the importance of the environment until it's too late. During my gap year, I travelled to many countries and learned about the culture and the traditions of different communities. It made me realize that the knowledge is not only in books, but also in the experiences we have.
