

ELISION OF /T/:

She must be tired
We sleptt through the storm.
He leftt school early.

Listen. Is there elision?

I can't stand the rain.
It must be time to leave
I met him at the center.
I don't want it

ELISION OF /D/:

I prefer steamed d potatoes.

I prefer boiled d potatoes.

I prefer steamed d potatoes to boiled d potatoes.

I prefer boiled d potatoes.

Listen. Is there elision?

My best friend let me borrow his car.

She called her friend yesterday.

Don't hold back – say what you mean.

He played chess with his brother

His bike rolled down the hill without him.