

He was strong and weird. He strolled along the eternal road every morning. His friends considered his promenades odd but they also knew that his temper made him do it.

He didn't like sitting at the table. He hated consulting. His work was supposed to be interesting but he preferred studying to teaching.

Soon the day came to the end. He said to himself: "I have to be honest with myself. And I have to make an accurate decision. What am I going to do further? Can I afford to waste my life?"

He continued going along the deserted street and thinking.

All his childhood he avoided crowded squares and parks. His ability to aim everything he wants helped him to become a famous lawyer. There is an anniversary this year: he has been working as a lawyer for the well-known firm for 25 years. He was tired. Nothing seemed able to shake him.

All of the sudden he heard a low voice...