SIMPLE PAST # 1

1. Lee el siguiente texto sobre la evolución del entretenimiento a través del tiempo. Luego, lee las oraciones y marca F si la afirmación es falsa (FALSE) o T si la afirmación es verdadera (TRUE)

When we think of entertainment, we often think about television, movies, and other media. But how did people entertain themselves before these were invented?

Thousands of years ago, people told stories as they sat around the fire. Stories were valuable because traditions, values, and cultural identity were preserved and passed on this way.

In the Middle Ages, the invention of the printing press made books easily available, so people had access to great stories without a storyteller. You could write a story and preserve it for other generations.

Radio was invented in the early 20th century. Its original function was to communicate with ships on the ocean, but people began to use it for information and entertainment.

The arrival of television provided another accessible form of entertainment. Because it combines audio and visual elements, television is a very powerful medium, and it has influenced our culture greatly.

Nowadays, social media is important. People find entertainment in connecting and interacting with their friends. They like to chat with them and share information, pictures, and feelings.

This is probably the most important function of entertainment: it helps us connect with other people.
