Girl: I bought a nice coat yesterday.

Boy: That one you the other day? The long one with a nice belt?

Girl: I wasn't sure about the buttons on that one – they were very big and looked a bit The new one's got a belt, but it's not a long coat like the other and the buttons are much smaller. It has a fur collar, too, to keep my neck warm in the winter. Don't worry! It's not real! That other coat just had a collar like a jacket.

2

Girl: I'm thinking of starting drum lessons.

Boy: Really? I thought you wanted to learn the piano like me.

Girl: I do, but I think it'll be too difficult.

Boy: It takes time to become good at any musical, but I found it fairly easy. And now I'm pretty good at it, it's time to have lessons on something else.

Girl: You could come to drum lessons with me.

Boy: My parents wouldn't beif I practised at home, though. I think the guitar would make a better option, so I'm going for that.

3

Boy: How's your new apartment?

Girl: Fine. I've got noabout my new bedroom – the one I had before was tiny. The view's not so good now, though. We're not so and you can only see it through the windows. It was so nice to be able to sit outside with a drink and look down at what was going on in the street below. There was no big fire in the living room at the old place, though, so where we are now is much

4

Boy: Phew! I'm really tired.

Girl: I'm not surprised if you've had a basketball match today, like you usually do on Saturdays.

Boy: I've given that up actually. I joined a table tennis club a few weeks ago, which I love, and couldn't doing both – I just don't have time.

Girl: That's a shame – you were pretty good.

Boy: Maybe, but don't forget that I'm a member of the school hockey team too, so I have practice and matches with them every week as well, although I missed the last game due to

5

Girl: Richard Ellis has won the schoolcompetition.

Boy: Who?

Girl: Richard Ellis ... you know, in Mrs Greenwood's class.

Boy: Oh, is he the one with short, dark hair, who always wears a shirt and tie for school, he doesn't need to?

Girl: I've never seen him wear anything else. I don't know why he doesn't just wear aand jeans, like us. His hair's a bit like mine, though – it comes right down to his shoulders.

Boy: I know who you mean, and it's quite light actually.

Girl: That's him!

There's a great evening's entertainment to look forward to. A new series of naturestarts tonight, and the first programme is all about a year in the life of a family of giraffes. That'sp just after Larry Lane brings us his Chat Show in a minute or two. His guests tonight include the actor Vincent Malibri and explorer, Katarina Lingstrom.after the news, there's a concert of classical music to enjoy, brought to you live from the National Theatre.

Girl: We need to decide what to buy mum for her birthday.

Boy: I thought you'd got her a necklace.

Girl: I saw a lovely one in theand was going to get that, but then dad said he'd already bought one for her.

Boy: There's that book she wants, that she was telling us about yesterday – one of us could get that and the other could get her some flowers. She always loves those.

Girl: My dance class is near the bookshop, so it'd be easy for me to call in there.

Boy: OK.

8

Boy: Hi, Angela. Waiting for the bus again? It's just as quick to town from here, you know.

Girl: I know it's strange,as it takes 15 minutes to walk here from home, but I work in a shop in town on Saturdays with a friend. She lives further out of town, so she gets the bus in. It's a bit moreif we go together.

Boy: But how do you know which one she'll be on?

Girl: The buses come every 10 minutes on weekdays, but only once an hour on Saturdays, so I know exactly which one to get!

9

Boy: Have you seen the video for Lionheart's new song yet?

Girl: Yes, I watched it last night. It's really not like their other, but I couldn't stop listening to it.

Boy: Maybe I'll start to like it once I've heard it a few more times. I don't think I've ever seen such anvideo, though.

Girl: I think they hired a Hollywood director to make it – you can tell because of the
.....

Boy: The dancing looked like something from another planet!

Girl: I thought it was the costumes that created that effect. The routines themselves were quite like other videos I've seen.

10

Girl: My parents say I can get a new phone for my birthday.

Boy: Hey, that's great. So which model are you going to choose? Reading what phone buyers have written about their phones is probably more reliable than listening to atelling you which one is best. I've heard that some phone companies give stores money for selling more of their phones, especially the newer, more expensive ones, so I'm not sure you could trust what they'd say.

Girl: That'sto know. I'll ask my parents what they think is the best way to choose, too.

Boy: Good idea.

11

Boy: You don't usually look so happy at the end of a school day.

Girl: That's because we've usually been given a load of maths problems to do for the next day. Not today,

Boy: But you're good at maths – you usually get high marks.

Girl: I know, but it still takes time. Anyway, you know I finished that .....project last week?

Boy: Yeah ...

Girl: Well, the teacher was sowith it, she gave me a book.

Boy: Wow, that's great. Next thing you know, they'll make you captain of the football team.

Girl: That'd be, but fairly unlikely as I hardly ever play football.

12

Girl: How was the weekend

Boy: Good, thanks. I had a really nice time with my cousins – we get on really well, and I always miss them for a few days after we come home. My aunt and uncle love having us there too, although he got a bit angry when my brother broke one of their

Girl: Oh, dear!

Boy:, it wasn't an old one, but I've never heard my uncle shout like that before. Visiting them for only a weekend's a bit cruel in a way. It feels like you've only just arrived andit's time to go.

13

Boy: Have you tried the new pool? It's

Girl: I went with my family last week. I had a few goes on those tubes with the water in – you know, the ones you can go down really fast and in the pool.

Boy: Oh yes, that was amazing.

Girl: I think I'd go back just to play on them. Lots ofused the old pool too, but only because they didn't have anywhere else to go. The water in this new one is nowhere near as warm, but it's better in a way because it keeps you moving.

Boy: True.

Hi everyone. I'm going to tell you about my trip to the new science museum last week. I went with my family and we looked around the whole museum. There are loads of different rooms and each onedisplays about a particular topic. We spent ages looking around the room that was all about space' and even longer in the one with loads of stuff on 'energy', which I thought was the best bit.

The museum's free, but there are also two specialthat you have to pay for. You can't go into the one on 'health' yet because it doesn't open for another couple of weeks. I'd like to go back and see that. The other exhibition on 'computers' was good, though.

As well as the, there are lots of things you can actually do there too. My brother made thiscar that went quite fast, using only power from the sun, while I created a rocket that used gas to fly. It went really high!

As well as the interesting things to see and do, there's a nice shop. My mum and dad let me get something because it was my birthday. There were so manysets to choose from, it took me ages to decide which one I wanted. They have the usual toys and games, and a few nice books there, too.

You can also take a tour of the museum with a When we arrived, they said we'd have to wait for at least sixty minutes for the..... tour because it was so popular, so we decidedit.

If you want to go, theis on Lockhart Road. I'll spell that for you, it's L-O-C-K-H-A-R-T Road.

Thanks for listening.

Woman: Erik, you've recently returned from a with your dad across the USA. Why did you want to do this ride?

Erik: I suppose the usual reason for doing something as mad as cycling five thousand kilometres in just two months is to make thousands of pounds for various We certainly did that, and spent large amounts of time with each other too, which was wonderful. We decided to go, though, because we fancied doing something really different during the summer holidays.

Woman: What made you choose to go across the USA and not other countries?

Erik: We'd thought about going through, but you need lots of different visas, all of which take ages to arrange. With the USA, there was none of that – one countryone visa. It's a shame that I didn't get to practise speaking any other languages, though. I'd wondered about how safe some of the cities would be, but they were fine.

Woman: How did you feel as you?

Erik: I was expecting to be so keen to set off that I wouldn't be able to sit still. When the time arrived, though, my Dad and I both felt pretty calm, which I found quite amazing. I don't think either of us had any worries about not finishing the ride – we were very confident.

Woman: What was aday like?

Erik: Every day was different. Some were good and some were quite difficult, but all were good experience. It wasn't actually how far we rode that made a day good or bad, it was more what happened. Having a longwith some of the local people seemed to make us even happier than feeling the sun on our faces.

Woman: And how did you and your dad get along?

Erik: We're always got on really well, so although we didn't agree about everything on the trip, we were always able to deal with any, which didn't happen often. And although we spoke about a few of the things that are important to us, over the two months we learned it was OK to spend a few hours sayingnothing, too.

Woman: And have you got plans for doing more cycling?

Erik: I'm in my final year at school now, and I need to do well to get to university, so it wouldn't be the best time for me to go cyclingAustralia, or wherever. Rather than just going out on weekend rides, though, I'd much prefer to enter some competitions – over shorter distances of course! I've never tried that before.

Woman: Good luck, Erik!
