

Direct and Indirect

1. The more questions you practice in math, the higher your confidence becomes.
2. The faster a fan rotates, the more air it gives.
3. If the number of players in a team decreases, each player has to play for more time.
4. If the speed of a car reduces, the time to reach school late increases.
5. The more books you read, the more new words you learn.
6. The more distance you travel, the more petrol is used.
7. If the speed of typing increases, the time to finish homework decreases.
8. The higher the temperature of water, the faster it evaporates.
9. If the number of teachers reduces, each teacher gets more periods to take.
10. The louder the whistle, the further it can be heard.