II/ The dancing

A/ Match

1/ The Sailor's Hornpipe 2/ The Sword Dance 3/ The Highland fling	a/ It was danced on the eve of battle: clansmen would cross their swords and if they could complete the war dance without touching the swords, it signified that they would be the victors. b/ It is a victory dance performed by soldiers and clansmen on the small round shield carried in battle. The quick precise steps were necessary due to the sharp steel spike projecting from its centre, making one false step rather painful. c/ Originally a Celtic dance, it is one of the traditional solo dances of the British Isles. The arm movements imitate many of the actions used by sailors in the days of wooden ships (hauling of ropes, rowing, climbing the rigging and saluting): it imitates a sailor's life aboard ship. The costume worn is based on a British seaman's uniform.
