Last Sunday, Nam visited his cousin in another province. In the morning, they walked around a small district near the mountains. Nam felt very excited because it was his first time seeing a real volcano. He said it looked awesome.

After that, they went to a sports centre to play volleyball. Nam brought his own racquet, but he couldn't use it because it was for tennis. His cousin laughed and gave him a net and a ball instead.

They played for an hour, then took a break. "You must not drink fizzy drinks after playing sports," his cousin said. "You should drink water or juice." Nam agreed.

In the afternoon, they visited a museum about animals and nature. Nam saw pictures of animals with thick fur and read a story about a missing dog that lived in a snowy mountain range. Before leaving, the guide said: "If you want to go hiking in the wild, you need to wear goggles and good shoes."
