Angel Falls, the highest waterfall in the world, is located deep in the remote jungles of Venezuela. The best way to reach this spectacular site is by air because of its isolated location. Dropping an incredible 3,212 feet, it is over 1,000 feet taller than any other waterfall on Earth. From a distance, it looks like a silver thread hanging from the clouds. Visitors can enjoy breathtaking scenery as the water plunges straight down the cliff, tumbling and foaming over the lower canyon wall. In the sunlight, the fine spray sparkles beautifully. The Falls were named after Jimmie Angel, a pilot who discovered them in 1937.

However, local people had already known about this wonder for generations, calling it Churun Meru
