

1.2 The qualities and principles of virtue ethics

part two

① Being truthful in what you say and do is what honesty entails.

Honesty is a moral quality that entails positive and virtuous characteristics such as being truthful, trustworthy, loyal, fair, and sincere. Honesty is defined as the behaviour and attitude of not telling or accepting lies. It is the practice of not stealing or cheating. Being honest means being loyal to one's fellow, one's responsibility, and one's country. At home, with our friends, in our community, at work, and at any other time in our lives, we must all be honest.

Honesty is always admired in the family, among friends, in civil society, and throughout the world. Everyone respects someone who is truthful. Being regarded as an honest person by society is one of the best compliments a person can receive in his or her entire life. In today's society, a lack of honesty is a way for disaster. Individuals with public responsibility have been observed abusing public property on occasion. This is dishonesty.

All of these are not characteristics of responsible citizens. Corruption not only leads to the mismanagement and abuse of resources, but it also has an impact on people's minds. As a result, as responsible citizens, we must all fight dishonest and corrupt behaviour. These are detrimental to progress and development.
