Why Do People Love Discounts?

People love discounts because they help save money while shopping. When products are sold at lower prices, customers feel happy to get more value for their money. Many stores offer seasonal sales, especially during holidays or special occasions, when items are much cheaper than usual. Customers often wait for these sales to buy expensive products at more affordable prices.

Another reason why discounts are so popular is that they encourage people to buy more. Seeing a big sale sign often makes customers excited and leads them to spend more than they had planned. Discounts can be a good way for people to purchase the items they need or want.

However, not all discounts are truly helpful. Some shops increase prices before a sale to make it look like there is a big discount. That's why smart shoppers compare prices before buying anything. This helps them avoid being tricked by fake discounts and make better decisions when shopping. Being a wise consumer is important to save both money and time.

(Adapted from: Global workbook 8)
