When you live in ¹ a house with a garden, you get used to the space. In ² summer, you can sit outside for meals and the children have somewhere to play. So we were quite worried when we had to move into a flat in the city. When you move into a small home after living in a large one, it ³ always easy. But actually, the area ⁴ we live now is lovely. There are three parks within walking distance and there's so much to do ⁵ we really don't miss the garden very much. Our bedrooms are actually bigger than at the old house and the living room is ⁶ biggest I've ⁷ seen. We've been going to a lot of museums and art galleries and the kids love going to the zoo and aquarium. There's a nice mixture of people here too. I ⁸ spoken to our neighbours briefly and they are both doctors. I think they ⁹ work at the local hospital. I'll ask them when I see them next time. There ¹⁰ to be a lot ¹¹ people around here who work at the hospital. Maybe I'll find a new job there, too! Anyway, we're really happy here and I'm looking forward to getting to know the area.

Reading

13 Read the article and match headings A–G with paragraphs 1–5. There are two extra headings.

1 B

In the past, A-list actors would rarely appear on television after becoming famous in films. That all seems to be changing now, with many big names choosing to do television rather than large budget movies. Has the small screen slowly begun to fight back in the battle against the big screen?

2 _____

Steve Buscemi, Billy Bob Thornton, Francis McDormand, Teri Hatcher, Alec Baldwin. These are all big movie stars who have starred in blockbuster movies over the years. What do they all have in common? That's right. They have all switched to television recently and starred in high quality TV series. In the past, this may have been seen as a step down in their careers – a sign that things can't be going too well for them professionally. However, these actors were all at the top of their game. So why did they decide to make the move?

3 _____

Perhaps the fact that major American film studios are all more interested in making films that rely on special effects and don't care about making films which challenge people to think. It's impossible to visit a cinema nowadays without seeing yet another superhero film advertised. What happened to all the dramas and thrillers with excellent plots that we used to see on the big screen? I'm talking about films like The Game, Frantic or Pulp Fiction. When was the last time you saw films of that quality at the cinema? You could say that people want to escape from reality and enjoy themselves. But there are many films for people to see like that. Not many for those who want to be challenged.

4 _____

Many people believe that this is why television is becoming so popular. In a television series there is time, over 12 or 24 episodes, to tell a good story with realistic character development and high-quality production. This attracts the actors who are more interested in acting than they are in trying to look good while dressed in colourful tights and capes. Furthermore, the popularity of online television services like Netflix and Amazon Prime, means that there is more money to invest in television. So even the actors who are just interested in the money are beginning to take notice of television.

5 _____

Personally, I welcome the change. Perhaps the film studios will begin to understand that people want more variety in the films they watch at the cinema. If they do, we might get to see some more interesting films at the cinema than we currently do.

A Film fights back

B The rise of TV

C Small screen – big quality

D Actors on the move

E Who are the superheroes?

F Things can only get better

G Where's the quality gone?
