School of the Air

Many people may be surprised to hear the name "School of the Air", but there are more than ten in Australia. One of them is Alice Springs School of the Air in the Northern Territory. It provides education for about 120 children in Central Australia. The students live far from each other, so they study at home instead of in a classroom. Teachers send lessons by email or post. Students study for five to six hours a day, five days a week. They send their work to the teachers and discuss it online. They can borrow books from the school library, and the books arrive by post. They also join in outdoor activities like sports and games.
