Free time

What do British teenagers do in their free time?

- British teenagers often stay at home in their free time. And what do they do? They watch TV, play computer games and surf the Internet. A survey says that they spend 20% of every day in front of televisions, games consoles and computers.
- After-school clubs are also popular. Most secondary schools in the UK have after-school clubs. The activities include dance, drama, music, computing, cooking and sport. There are also some unusual activities, for example, tai chi, yoga and photography. The clubs are usually free.
- Sport is a popular free-time activity. Swimming is the favourite free-time sport for girls and the top sports for boys are football and skateboarding.
- At weekends, young teenagers sometimes go to stay at a friend's house. This is called a sleepover and it's particularly popular with girls.

On weekdays, I usually meet my friends after school and we go skateboarding. I go to Kids' Cookery Club once a week after school. A chef comes to the school and we learn to cook. I really enjoy it! We make pizzas, lasagne, biscuits and other things. The lessons are free but we pay £1 every week for the ingredients. After the lesson, we eat the food, so I have my dinner at school on Mondays! That's really cool!

I don't go out very often in the week but I go to CC4G (Computer Club For Girls) after school on Wednesdays. I like the club because it's really interesting and we do great things. At weekends, I often have a sleepover. My best friend, Amy, comes to stay at my house or I go to her house for the night. We usually watch Smallville and Lost on TV and we sometimes watch a DVD. When we go to bed, we always talk for hours. It's brilliant!
