1 Read and match.

Here are some more stories that Paul's friends have sent him about things that they remember when they were young. Read the stories and look at the pictures. Match each picture to a story.

Eight years ago, my family went to Morocco for a holiday. When we arrived at the hotel, we were cold and tired so we went straight to bed. I woke up early the next morning and looked out of the window. I'll always remember what I saw. Everywhere I looked was covered in white ... it was amazing! It was the first time I ever saw real snow!

Years ago, I was frightened of the dark. I remember that I was especially frightened if there were noises like cats miaowing outside my bedroom window at night. When that happened, my father read me a story until I went to sleep.

When I was 6, my family visited some relatives in Malaysia. One day, we all went for a ride in a cable car. It was very exciting. As we went higher and higher, I could see trees, a river, and houses and buildings. Everything looked really small. There were some cars driving up and down a road. My father said they were so small that they looked like ants running up and down a tree! It really made me laugh.
