Last Saturday, Katy had nothing to do. 'I'm bored,' she said. There were some holiday magazines next to her and she picked one up and started to read it. 'That's it!' she said. 'I'm going to plan a holiday. I want to do something new and exciting.'

Her friends came to her house. 'What are you doing, Katy?' they asked.

'I'm planning an exciting holiday,' she explained. 'I want to do something different.'

David opened a magazine. 'Have you ever ridden a camel across the desert?' he asked.

'No, I haven't,' answered Katy. 'But the desert is too hot.'

Robert took another magazine. 'Have you ever been skiing in the mountains?' he asked.

'Yes, I have,' said Katy. 'We went last year. I was too cold. I wasn't warm enough.'

'Have you ever eaten octopus in a restaurant by the sea?' asked Helen.

'No, I haven't,' said Katy. 'I prefer my mum's cooking.'

'Are you sure you want to do something new and exciting?' asked David.

'No,' said Katy. 'I'm not bored any more. This is fun!'

Michael I loved it here, Mr Brown.
Can we come again next week?

Mr Brown 1 _____

Michael OK. I have some questions for you. The Earth is bigger than the sun, isn't it?

Mr Brown 2 _____

Michael Really? I didn't know that.
The sun looks so small in the sky, doesn't it?

Mr Brown 3 _____

Michael And astronauts can't visit the sun, can they?

Mr Brown 4 _____

Michael Oh, I see. Are we going to watch a film about the sun and the planets, like you said?

Mr Brown 5 _____

- A Of course not. The Earth is one of the smallest planets.
- B Why not? I'd love to visit it one day.
- C No, it's very far and very hot so it's dangerous for people to go there.
- D Well, you can see space in the sky at night.
- E I'm not sure about that but I'm happy you liked it.
- F I never liked that job.
- G Sure. We've got an interesting one at school. I think everyone will like it.
- H Well, it does, but that's because it's very far.

A place for skateboarding

Robert's dad worked in the park in their town. He looked after the park, and he grew all the flowers there. The flowers looked wonderful every summer, and hundreds of people visited the park to see them.

Robert and his friend Paul loved skateboarding around the park. But there was a problem. They had to be careful of the people who were walking on the paths, and when the park was busy, the boys couldn't go skateboarding there because it was too dangerous.

Last spring, Robert and his dad were talking. 'We need a special place for skateboarding in the park,' Robert said. Dad agreed, but added 'I'm sorry, Robert, the park hasn't got enough money for that.' 'We'll get the money!' said Robert.

Robert and Paul collected hundreds of old plastic cups from the park's café, and grew flowers in them. Robert's dad helped them. Then, every Saturday, they sold them to all the people who came to the park. The boys collected lots of money, but not enough.

Then, in July, a journalist wrote a story about Robert and his friend in their town's online newspaper, which she worked for. A very kind, rich businesswoman read the story, and thought it was fantastic. She gave the park enough money to build a brilliant place for skateboarding.
