

“The Adventure Before the Adventure”

Finn woke up early, feeling that something unusual was about to happen. He grabbed his sword and rushed to the Tree House. When he arrived, he noticed that Jake had already left. There was no sound, no laughter, and no pancakes on the table. Finn had never seen the house so quiet. A small note lay on the floor: “Finn, don’t follow me. I’ll explain later.” That message made Finn even more curious.

Worried, he looked through every corner of the house. The kitchen door was open, and he realized Jake had just eaten something quickly before leaving. Finn had not taken his backpack yet, but he ran outside as soon as he heard a distant howl in the forest. He stopped for a moment and thought, “Has Jake ever gone on a mission without telling me?” The answer was no. Something serious was happening.

As Finn followed the footprints, he remembered their past adventures. Jake had always protected him, especially during dangerous quests. But this time felt different. The sky was turning orange, and the wind carried a strange whisper. Finn understood that this new adventure had begun long before he woke up. Whatever Jake had discovered, it was bigger than they had ever faced. And Finn was determined to find him — even if he had to step back in time to do it.
