Task 2: Reading Text

1950s and TODAY

People are often shocked by the unhealthy lifestyles shown in TV shows like Mad Men. But are we really any healthier than we were 70 years ago?

Food and drink	Health care
People didn't use to worry about how many calories they ate. The government advised people to eat meat, cheese, butter, cereal and bread every day. They also recommended two glasses of milk a day. Today the advice has changed. They say we should eat more vegetables and less meat, cheese and butter. But we don't listen. Not many of us eat a healthy diet. 60% of us are now overweight. In the UK, the average woman will spend 31 years of her life on a diet. For a man, it's 28 years.	People didn't use to live as long as we do today. Hospital operations were much less common, and people only used to go to the doctor when they were seriously ill. Today, we live longer, but we have new health problems. In the 1950s, most kids drank milk and ate peanuts without any problems, but more people have allergies to various foods today. And the number of people who have diabetes is also increasing, because more people are overweight.
AVERAGE WEIGHT IN KG in the 1950s: woman 55 - man 65 today: woman 70 - man 83	AVERAGE AGE AT DEATH in the 1950s: 65 today: 79
Exercise	Cigarettes
Most women used to keep in shape naturally by doing housework – the average housewife did three hours of housework every day. They didn't need to go to the gym to lose weight and get fit. Today, busy working lives make it harder to get enough exercise. Inventions like washing machines, freezers and cars have made our lives easier, so it's now much easier to put on weight.	Smoking used to be very popular. The big Hollywood stars like James Dean and Audrey Hepburn all smoked on screen. In the UK, 80% of adults were regular smokers. People just didn't know how dangerous it was and didn't try to give up smoking. Today, we all know the dangers, and it's now illegal to smoke in public places like offices, schools and restaurants.
CALORIES BURNT DOING HOUSEWORK in the 1950s: 1992 per day Today: 556 per day	SMOKERS (% OF POPULATION) in the 1950s: 80% today: 20%
