The management team at Orion Motors is preparing for a big production project. They had a crucial meeting and need to make some important decisions. The following information was mentioned:

If everyone __makes up their minds___ (make up your mind) quickly, we_will reach_ (reach) an agreement before Friday. But if people keep arguing, the project will face delays.

The HR director suggested that if the company _____(invite) experts from outside, they _____(evaluate) the plan more objectively. That's a real possibility.

However, the project leader disagrees. She says that if the managers _____(prioritize) teamwork over personal opinions, they _____(avoid) unnecessary conflict.

Some employees think about what would happen in a more unreal situation.
They say that if the company _____ (delegate) more tasks to junior staff, the managers _____ (have) more time to focus on strategy.
And if everyone _____(ignore) minor problems, they _____(work) faster and with less stress.

Despite the previous comments, the general director finished with a relevant future possibility: the company _____(reach) better results in the long term if people _____(evaluate) every risk carefully.
