Serengenti National Park

It was something I never expected to happen. Yet it did. I (0) gone on a trip to one of the most beautiful places on earth, the Serengenti National Park, Tanzania. My aunt (1) brings me along to join a group of her adventurous friends. We flew first to Dar Es Salaam and then took a (2) connect flight to Seronera Airport.

On our way, we drove (3) in the protected volcanic area of Ngorongoro Conservation Area. We witnessed breathtaking wildlife, landscapes and natural resources at the volcanic caldera. (4) A crater was huge. I felt like I was in Jurassic Park. I saw a hippo up close. It was surreal. After leaving Ngorongoro, we drove past several Masai tribal (5) village, their huts made of mud and straw, surrounded by grazing cattle. It was another eye-opening experience for me to see these fearless people living their authentic lives.

After a long, bumpy and dusty drive, we finally arrived at the beautiful Mbalageti Safari Camp. My first night there, it really (6) sink in that I was really at the Serengenti when I heard the sounds of baboons and hyenas around our campsite. The next morning, with the rising sun painting the sky in hues of orange and yellow, we embarked on our safari adventure.

We hopped into (7) their safari vehicle, a sturdy Land Rover to help navigate the vast, golden plains. It didn't take long when we spotted a pride of lions lounging under a tree. The thrill of witnessing these creatures in their natural habitat was electrifying. Thankfully, I had 13 days to go! Over the next few days, we saw massive elephants, giraffes, zebras and other majestic animals, and every encounter leaving me breathless (8) in wonder.
