Tom Daley and His Love for Knitting

The famous British diver, two-time Olympic gold medal winner, Tom Daley, made quite the headline during the Tokyo 2020 Olympics. It wasn't just for his gold medal winning in diving but also for his constant knitting during the events. He has embraced this fun hobby wholeheartedly. This creative activity has become an integral part of his life, especially when he needs to wind down and relax during training or during his spare time.

He picked up knitting in March 2020 during the height of the pandemic lockdown. Like many others, he used the time to try new hobbies to cope with social isolation. He ordered some needles and yarn then watched hours of knitting tutorials on YouTube. With all of the time he had during lockdown, he practiced more and made all sorts of items, like sweaters and hats, showcasing his growing skill and artistic flair.

It was during the Tokyo 2020 Olympics where he was seen knitting in the stands which caught the public's attention. This highlighted his love for his hobby and served as one way for him to relax amidst the intense competition. Many fans admired his ability in balancing a high-pressure sport with a calming hobby. He continued to knit between events in the recent Paris 2024 Olympics. He even mentioned that he owed his two golds to knitting, which has helped him to focus and remain calm.

Tom doesn't just see knitting as a way to unwind. It is also a means for him to bond with knitting enthusiasts and showcase his projects to them. It also helps to inspire them to explore hobbies that bring happiness and fulfilment into their lives. Through his knitting endeavours he has made a difference in the community by openly sharing how the craft has benefitted his mental wellbeing. Moreover, he has used his talent to raise awareness for issues like mental health and has generously donated his knitted creations, to charity auctions.
