IV. Read the following passage and do as directed. (17-22)

Nonverbal communication plays a significant role in our interactions. It includes facial expressions, gestures, posture, and eye contact. Our body language often communicates our feelings and emotions, even without saying a word. For example, a smile can express happiness, while crossed arms may indicate defensiveness or disagreement. Eye contact shows engagement and interest in a conversation. Understanding nonverbal cues helps us interpret messages accurately and respond accordingly. By being aware of our own body language and observing others', we can enhance our communication skills and develop better connections with those around us. Nonverbal communication adds depth and richness to our interactions, allowing us to convey subtle messages and understand others beyond spoken words.
