I. Read the passage below and answer the questions that follow. Write your answers using NO MORE THAN THREE WORDS.

The Role of Personality and Attitudes in Education and Society

In modern classrooms, students are expected to collaborate and demonstrate qualities that go beyond academic skills. Social flexibility allows individuals to adapt their communication styles depending on the people and context, a skill highly valued in both school and work environments. Another important trait is creativity, which encourages learners to think outside the box and propose unique solutions to complex problems.

However, some students may be seen as rebellious, challenging rules and authority, often causing classroom disruptions. Others might be labelled as cheeky, especially when their humour crosses the line into disrespect.

In discussions and group tasks, learners are often supposed to show considerate behaviour, listening actively and giving others a chance to speak without interrupting. A lack of this can lead to conflict.

In society, young people tend to look up to those who succeed through effort and resilience. However, under peer pressure, some may succumb to bad influences, engaging in risky behaviours that bring negative consequences. Schools and communities continue to raise awareness of this issue to encourage responsible decision-making.
