The Tower of Pisa

The Leaning Tower of Pisa is a very famous building in Italy. The people from Pisa started building it in 1173 and it took them 200 years to complete it. This was because of wars and problems happening at that time. But something interesting happened during its construction - it started to incline to one side! This happened because the ground under the tower was too soft.

The Leaning Tower of Pisa is made of white marble and has eight levels. You can see beautiful arches and columns on each level. Originally, the tower was supposed to be a bell tower for a church called Pisa Cathedral. But its leaning position became its most famous characteristic. Some architects and engineers tried to fix it, but they couldn't. Also, the tower has been fixed many times to make sure it is safe. In 1990, it was closed for more than ten years to make it stronger. Engineers did a good job, and the tower has been open to visitors since then.

When you visit the tower, you can climb up its 294 steps. From the top, you can see an amazing view of the city of Pisa. It's really incredible! But be careful, because the tower still leans, so it feels a little strange when you're inside.

The Leaning Tower of Pisa is a special symbol of Italy. People from all over the world come to see it and learn about its interesting history. It reminds us of how people worked hard to build it and how they continue to take care of it today. It's a unique and remarkable building that will be here for a long, long time.
