Indonesia's Independence Day is celebrated every year Any kinds of competition wat in a held to celebrate the Independence Day, At that time, me trends and I were very enthusiastic about participating in competitions held at school. Said, Bintang, and I took part in a competition called musical chair. Most of my friends took part in a soccer competition, and very few of them wanted to take part in the musical chair. Finally, the three of us agreed to take part in the competition.

The first competition was football, Meanwhile, the musical chair and the tug of war would start at 08.30 a.m. The clock struck exactly 08.30 when the committee called us. In the first round, no one came out of the circle. In the second round, Bintang was out because he was late to sit on the chair. I came out in the fourth round. So did Said, he was able to survive until the last round, but eventually came out. We didn't expect that the three of us would be out of the game. We took photos and then went to the canteen. Bintang bought three glasses of iced tea for us. I bought a loaf of bread and ate it. After finishing our meals, Said and I went to the field to see our friends playing football. When Said and I arrived, the match score was already 2-2. In the end, our class lost with a score of 2-3. That's too bad. Even though we didn't win, we were still happy because we could participate in the event. We learned about working together, deliberating, and most importantly, about courage and struggle.

The Loyal Companions

In a quaint village, there lived two friends, Mia and Lily. Mia, a farmer's daughter, had a loyal dog named Max, while Lily, a baker's daughter, had a clever cat named Coco. They spent every day together, exploring the countryside. One winter, a harsh snowstorm struck, blanketing the village in snow. Food became scarce, and the villagers struggled. Mia and Lily decided to share what little they had with others, despite their scarcity. As days passed, the situation worsened. Mia's farm ran out of supplies, and Lily's bakery had no flour left. Feeling disheartened, they trudged through the snow, seeking help. On their way, Max and Coco noticed their distress and devised a plan. Max guided the villagers to Mia's farm, where Coco directed them to Lily's bakery. Together, they helped gather resources, ensuring everyone had food and warmth. Mia and Lily were astounded by their pets' intelligence and selflessness. Witnessing the friendship and teamwork between Max and Coco, Mia and Lily understood the true essence of loyalty and cooperation. Inspired by their companions, they worked together, pooling resources to support the villagers until the storm passed

Once upon a time, there was a good king lived in Ireland. His name was King Lir. He had four children, two boys and two girls, whom he loved dearly. However, their stepmother was jealous. She wove a spell that turned the children into swans. Lir was heartbroken. His beard and hair turned white. With grief he searched for his children. One day he saw four swans. He did not realise who they were, although they recognised him as their father. The spell could only be broken if the mountain in the north was joined to the one in the south. This seemed impossible, but after many years all the birds flew into the air and formed an arc between the mountains. The swans were transformed and Lir saw his children once more. They were no longer young, but had grown old, with his hair as white as their father's.

Yesterday, I celebrated the Indonesian Independence Day with my friends in our neighborhood. It was a massive celebration. We held many competitions for the day like table tennis, clog race, sack race, marble race, cracker-eating eating competition, and the most awaited competition, pinang cliimbing competition. Many kids from next block also joined our competition. I myself participated in table tennis competition. I got the second place, though. I have done my best to win the competition but my opponent was too strong. My brother and his friends took part in the pinang climbing. Pinang climbing is Indonesian tradition in celebrating independence day. In that competition, there were many teams, climbing a pinang log which held many prize on its peak. But the pinang log was covered with a lot of oil. Each teams struggle to reach the peak. My brother's team won the pinang climbing competition. They were so happy because they got many prizes. Hello, my name is Riko. I am 13 years old. I'm in the first grade at a junior high school. When I was at the elementary school, my school held a parade around the neighbourhood. The parade was held to celebrate the Indonesia's Independence Day. In the beginning of the parade, there were several teachers wearing various kinds of traditional clothes and various kinds of unique clothes too. They waved at the audiences while holding our nation's flag. Then, in the next row, there was a marching band. All the members of the marching band were the male teachers and male students. They wore costume from old newspaper. They used old home equipment and tools as their musical instruments. They not only played music, but they also sang our national anthems. In the end of the parade, there were students riding their bicycles. Their bicycles were decorated very beautifully, and some were ellen decorated to resemble aeroplanes and ships. It was really creative. They pedaled their bikes enthusiatically. When I saw the parade, I felt like I also wanted to join it, especially when I saw the parade of decorated bicycles, because I also had a bicycle at home. Why didn't I join the parade? Because I was sick at that time and I only could watch from my house balcony.
