

Critical Thinking and Media Literacy

In today's digital age, we are constantly (1) or (2) . With such an enormous flow of news, it's crucial to know how to manage it. A true journalist must always (3) and (4) when composing a report, demonstrating a (5) to truth and objectivity. However, many modern media outlets (6) and (7) . Sometimes, they publish an (8) simply because it is a (9) that will attract viewers (10) . As a critical reader, you should always remember that news organizations often (11) . It is vital to (12) and (13) before accepting information as fact. Be especially careful when you suspect someone is trying to (14) or (15) either (16) or (17) . When confronted with controversial information, your first task is to (18) . You need to (19) and determine if it comes from a (20) . Sometimes, you might get a (21) about the truthfulness of a story—that's your (22) . In other words, you must (23) if you feel the media might (24) its audience. This proactive approach is key to fighting misinformation