Tunes For Names!

Did you know that all the children who are born and (1) in the village of Kongthong in India are not only given a name but also a tune? When a baby is born, the mother comes up with a melody for her child. Each melody is one of a (2); in other words, nobody else in the village will have the same tune. These melodies are used to get people's (3) just like names. For example, if a parent wants to call their son or daughter in for dinner, they go outside and whistle or sing that child's tune! They don't sing the whole thing, though, just the beginning. The (4) melody is only used by adults working in the fields and forests who want to communicate with each other. With 650 people in Kongthong, you can't help (5) how they remember everyone's tunes – but they do! Of course, if anyone leaves their (6) village to live in the city, they will use their name instead of their melody.
