Hi Paula. Thanks a lot for inviting me to your birthday party on Saturday. I'd really love to come but we are all going to my cousin's birthday this weekend. We're staying there till Sunday. So, happy birthday to you and I hope you'll have a great party. Pity I can't be there. See you at school on Monday.

I've read your blog about making best friends and I'm not sure I agree that it's always your schoolmates. I mean, you can make new friends everywhere: at school, on holiday or in the gym. What really matters is who you can call a real friend. In my opinion, it's someone you can trust and who'll always help you when you need it. It isn't easy to make friends for life, but they're the important ones, and it's not everyone you just know or hang out with.

In his comment John talks about :

A the best way to make new friends. B the problems with making new friends.

C what kind of people are best friends.

Hi Sophie,

I'm writing to ask you about your Halloween plans. If you haven't got any, why don't you come and stay with me this year? The town is organising a special attraction called the SCARY MUSEUM TOUR. The idea is that instead of its normal display, the museum will turn into a haunted house, with exhibitions of costumes, creepy things and so on. The best thing, though, is that during the tour the museum staff, dressed up as different historical figures, will jump out, scare the visitors and tell them about a historical event. Well, if it's as good as last year's SPOOKY MAZE ADVENTURE, it'll be really great fun. And don't worry – I'm not going to ask you to go trick or treating. I know you think it's only for small kids. Let me know as soon as you can because I need to get the tickets for the museum tour and I'm afraid they'll sell out quickly.
